I mean in the line of business, to do with the world of publishing.

Has he discovered any new and original talent?

He's quite talented at uncovering talent, old Jerry.

EMMA No message.

(3)ROBERT No message. Not even his love?

(Silence)

EMMA We're lovers.

(4)ROBERT Ah. Yes.

I thought it might be something like that, something along those lines.

EMMA When?

(5)ROBERT What?

EMMA When did you think?

(6)ROBERT Yesterday. Only yesterday. When I saw his handwriting on the letter.

Before yesterday I was quite ignorant.

EMMA Ah.

(Pause)

I'm sorry.

(7)ROBERT Sorry?

(Silence)

Where does it...take place? Must be a bit awkward.

I mean we've got two kids, he's got two kids, not to mention a wife...

EMMA We have a flat.

(8)ROBERT Ah. I see.

(Pause)

Nice?

(Pause)

A flat. It's quite well established then, your...uh...affair?

EMMA Yes.

(9)ROBERT How long?

EMMA Some time.

(10)ROBERT Yes, but how long exactly?

EMMA Five years.

(11)ROBERT Five years?

(Pause)

Ned is one year old.

(Pause)

Did you hear what I said?

EMMA Yes. He's your son. Jerry was in America. For two months.

(Silence)

(12)ROBERT Did he write to you from America?

EMMA Of course. And I wrote to him.

(13)ROBERT Did you tell him that Ned had been conceived?

EMMA Not by letter.

(14)ROBERT But when you did tell him, was he happy to know I was to be a father?

(Pause)

I've always liked Jerry.

To be honest, I've always liked him rather more than I've liked you.

Maybe I should have had an affair with him myself.

(Silence)

Tell me, are you looking forward to our trip to Torcello?
