四、翻譯題(30%)

1. Public policy allows government to assume a parent's role in citizens' lives. It provides opportunities; it guards one's physical well-being and safety; it provides financial security; and it maintains the security of one's homeland. (10 分)
2. Public choice economics argues that under the current administrative system public agencies are institutionally incapable of representing the demands of individual citizens. Since the citizens is a consumer of government goods and services, administrative responsiveness to individual citizen demands would be increased by creating a market system for governmental activities based on microeconomic theory. In this market system the citizen-consumer would be given a choice, as in free-enterprise economics, between competing services. (20 分)
