For many people, traveling is more than just moving from one place to another. Travel can be a kind of education, one that is acquired through experiences--- experiences with new and unfamiliar people, places and customs. Some people claim that how we deal with these experiences and what we learn from them can often have more value than an education at one of the world’s greatest universities. Do you agree with this statement? Why or why not? (Adapted from “Pathways 4” by Blass & Vargo)
