Answer all of the following questions in English. Give examples when relevant.

1. Define public history and discuss the work and roles of public historians.

(25%)

2. A prominent historian recently declared that, "In a 'post-truth' age of 'alternative facts' and 'fake news,' historians must ask fundamental questions about our public roles. We might think of ourselves as above the fray; viewing developments with a certain detachment. But as soon as we enter the classroom, we become historical actors whose choices have broad consequences. We have a moral obligation to think seriously about how we, as a discipline, can help strengthen democratic institutions." Discuss this assertion and what it means for contemporary historians. (25%)

3. "Only the vanquished remember history," or, "History is written by the victors." Discuss which claim is more true, and why? Give examples. (25%)

4. Discuss recent trends to make the study of history more inclusive. Give examples. (25%)
