• Please choose one of these three questions and write a short argumentative essay that follows a traditional structure (introduction, body, and conclusion) to answer it. The essay should be written in formal academic English. There are no correct or incorrect answers; your grade will be based on the quality of your writing and your argumentation. (100%) <ol style="list-style-type: none">1. How much influence does individual agency have on the course of human history compared to other potential influences beyond any individual's control?2. Could or should an academic historian use their scholarship for the sake of social or political activism?3. In the twenty-first century, how have the various crises we have faced or are facing (climate change, the COVID pandemic, the various regional wars around the world, the rise of new 'populist' political movements, &c.) changed the way we understand the relationship between the past, present, and future?
